

Storm Sweeps Midwest: Snow in Arkansas

By United Press

The season's worst storm swept over the midwest today, lashing a wide area with rain, wind and drifting snows that blocked roads, tore up communications and isolated many Great Plains communities.

Big Piney, Wyo., three below at Sinclair, Wyo., four above at Trinidad, Colo., and eight above at Pueblo, Colo.

Julius Badner, U. S. Weather
Bureau forecaster at Chicago, said the storm was centered over Louisiana, La., at 7 a.m. (EST). He said the storm center seemed to be "spreading out and slowing somewhat in its northeasterly movement."

He said the storm was "one of the series born in the Pacific that hit Oregon earlier this week."

"It lost some of its force moving through the Rockies but redeveloped on the high plains," Badewitz said. "Now it looks as though it will move clear across the country and right on into the Atlantic."

The music was written by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein, the same popular team which gave us the music of "Oklahoma". The story is that of Perene Molnar's play "Liliom" first produced in Vienna, then in New York took, however, many years to persuade the author "to agree to a production of the play in secret rooms on Broadway and six months. Chicago has proved the Guild right in its stubbornness to suppress and retard the production of a play so involved in its production. The present production is the only one in existence."

Michael McClellan has scored another hit with her ballet in the play; Ruben Mamoulian, new laurels with his direction. It is a large and colorful production.

Favorite songs are: "If I Loved You"; "When I Marry Mr. Snow"; "June's Dream and All Over"; "The Song of the Sparrow"; "That was a Bad Nice Chamber"; the famous "Soliloquy" and the inspirational finale "You'll Never Be Alone."

Like "Oklahoma" the show is leading the managers a great deal of money to set it.

Daughter Defends
Roosevelt's
Yalta Pact

Los Angeles, Nov. 17 —(AP)—Anna Roosevelt Boettiger today answered charges that she had made war-time commitments at Yalta.

The late president's daughter, speaking on the ABC program "Eleanor Roosevelt and Anna Boettiger," said today that she was not at Yalta.

"Now it happens I was at Yalta with my father and Mr. Ballin was not," she said. "My father was there, but his mind remained as decisive as ever, and definitely the thought of appeasement never entered it."

"What was foremost was the steadfast and long-range goal of a secure lasting peace."

Dairy Foreman to Take It Easy on $600,000 Inherited

Chicago, Nov. 17 (UPI)—A 32-year-old dairy foreman said today he would "take it easy" for the rest of his life on the $600,000 he inherited from an aunt he never met.

Frank Gannar Seaburg said he probably will give up his home here and his $78-a-week job so he can enjoy the money.

That's the catch in the inheritance, Seaburg said a dispatch from Copenhagen told him that he would inherit $600,000 Danish kroner, or about $600,000, from a wealthy aunt, Mrs. Henry Hansen, who died there recently at the age of 81.

But the Danish national bank is making a hard decision. He had to say whether he would stay here or go to Denmark. He said he would stay here.

THE STORY
THE 1880 Place, New Orleans. Well-to-do Louis Durand carries on a correspondence courtship with a Miss Julia Russell, whom he has never seen. When she finally comes from St. Louis to marry him, he is amazed to find her young and ravishingly beautiful—entirely different from what he had been led to expect. Cer- tain behavior of hers puzzles him from the first but not until a letter arrives from her supposed sister—Miss Russell's sister—does he realize the woman he married is an impostor. Before he can face her with it, she disappears with $50,000, withdrawn from his bank account. The police advise him to go to St. Louis to see what he can find out. He does so, calls on Julia Russell's sister. Comparing notes they realize that something must have happened to Julia Russell. They call in Walter Downs, private investigator. Downs suggests that he and Durand take the same boat back to New Orleans that Miss Russell traveled on.

XIX
The captain of the CITY OF NEW ORLEANS was named Fletcher. He was deliberate of speech, the type of man who thinks well before speaking.

"Yes," he said at long last, after hearing Downs' exhaustive description. "Yes, I do recall a little lady such as you describe. The breeze blew her skirt just as we were both coming along the deck from opposite directions. And she quickly held it down with her hands. But for a moment—"

"He didn't finish it," his eyes, however, were firmly fixed on the captain. "Then as I passed, I tipped my hat. She dropped her eyes and would not see me—"

"And now this one," Downs said. He offered in assistance a small photograph of Julia supplied them by Bertha, much similar to the one once owned by Durand. The captain studied it at length, but with no great relish.

"No," he said at last, handing it back. "No, I've never seen this old maid—this woman."

Durand thumbed the pushbutton in the little cabin cubbyhole and the door opened. A woman appeared. "Not you," Durand told the ladies' cabin."

A stewardess appeared in dilatory turn. He gave her a coin. "I want to ask you something. See if you can remember. Did you ever come to one of your ladies' cabins of a morning, and find the trunk undisturbed, no one had been in it?"

She nodded readily. "She," lots of times. We ain't full up every time."

"No, I'll have to ask it another way. Then, did you ever come to one of your ladies' cabins which had had someone in it first, and then find the trunk untouched?"

She wasn't sure; she stretched and strove, but she wasn't sure. He tried to help her. "With somebody's clothes in it, perhaps. With a birdcage in it?"

She ignited into recollection, like tinder when the spark strikes it square. "That's right, that's how it was! How you know that? Can't have a birdcage in it, and I didn't have to teach the bird, no more."

He nodded darkly. "No one had lain in it the night before."

She drew up short. "I didn't say that. The lady fix up her berth herself before I get there."

"How do you know by a vote of 17 to 8. And even the eight votes cast in his favor generally were recognized more as a testimonial to his long work in the union rather than as support of his stand."

Complaints among leaders of British trade unions also were re- bufted at the recent meeting of the powerful British trades union Congress, representing 8,000,000 trade unionists.

Over left-wing opposition, the Congress endorsed the labor gov- ernment's policy of freezing wages as well as prices and decided to break away from the Communist-dominated world federation of trade unions.

Communists

Losing Out in Britain

By RICHARD D. McMILLAN

London, Nov. 19 —(UPI)— The Communist party is fighting a losing battle for power in Socialist Britain.

Its membership is down nearly 20 per cent from a peak of 50,000 at the end of the war. Its influence in trade unions is on the wane under the pressure of a determined anti-Communist campaign. It has only two members in parliament.

And its every attempt to infiltrate or merge with the labor party—the Socialist party which governs Britain—has been re- bufted.

The Communist party's only suc- cess in the last few years has been with its newspaper, The Daily Worker. It has been expanded, has in- creased its circulation to 120,000 and boasts among its regular con- tributors, Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the "Red Dean" of Canterbury.

The source of The Daily Work- er's funds is a mystery. The party has been accused of receiving money from the Soviet Union and from sym- pathizers. It hints that trade unions bought blocks of shares.

The Daily Worker's emphasis on trade union news to a greater ex- tent even than labor news in the Herald and other leftist sports week- lies are credited with extending its readership beyond Communist party ranks.

The decline in Communist in- fluence in Britain dates mainly from the Communists' bloodless coup in Czechoslovakia. This shook many mild party sympathizers into a realization of Moscow's aims for world domination. They began to doubt British leaders' reassurances that the British brand of commu- nism is strictly a home product free of domination from Moscow.

Thus the party's membership has dwindled to 41,000 from 50,000 four years ago.

The British Communists tried to capitalize on the French miners' strike, but were promptly slapped down.

Arthur Horner, able Communist secretary of the British National Mine Workers' union, went to Paris and made speeches of endorsing the strike on behalf of British miners.

On his return to London, the union's executive reprimanded Horner for his speeches by a vote of 17 to 8. And even the eight votes cast in his favor generally were recognized more as a testimonial to his long work in the union rather than as support of his stand.

Complaints among leaders of British trade unions also were re- bufted at the recent meeting of the powerful British trades union Congress, representing 8,000,000 trade unionists.

DOROTHY DIX

Time for Intervention

Dear Miss Dix: My son is an intelligent man of refined tastes and habits. He is successful in busi- ness and provides his wife with a lovely home and all the comforts of life. She is a good woman and loves my son very much, but she has no regard for the niceties of life. She keeps a filthy home and is very untidy about her person. She doesn't even bother to comb her hair and put on a clean dress to greet her husband when he comes home from work. The meals that she puts before him are not fit to eat and the table linen is not always soiled.

My son is becoming disgusted with his wife and is ceasing to care for her. He stays away from home as much as he can, and I fear he is falling in love with a friend of his wife's who is trim and tidy and a good housekeeper.

What can I do to preserve my son's happiness and his home?

A MOTHER
Answer: Your son's wife needs a lot that will jar her wisdom teeth loose; and it seems to me that you are the one who will have to administer it, which is a job, as mothers-in-law are not so popular that they can afford to be bearers of bad news.

Truth Must Be Told
However, it is not so much being persona grata with your son's wife as saving him and his home that concerns you; and while it may offend your daughter-in-law to be told a few plain truths, the time will come when she will thank you and realize that you have been her best friend.

Tell her that if she wants to hold her husband and keep out of the divorce courts, she has to be up and doing and on her job every minute. Certainly no married woman can call it a day and knock off work when she gets married. As a matter of fact, her labor just begins because it is a million times more difficult to keep a husband interested and satisfied and in an adoring attitude than it was a sweetheart.

The lazy, slothful wife who is too indolent to keep herself clean, or give her husband good food, or turn out a workmanlike job of her housekeeping is bound to lose her husband. Maybe if you tell your daughter-in-law that she is about to lose out to a better woman, she will wake up and get busy on her job.

Dear Dorothy Dix: What would you suggest for breaking off an undesirable engagement? My daughter, who is 20, is engaged to a man of 40. I think he is too old for her, but she is very stubborn and I can't talk her out of any- thing.

WORRIED
Answer: If the man is of good character and able to support a wife, there is no reason why the engagement should be broken off, for while the difference in age is insuperable objection, it is not an insuperable objection. A great deal depends upon the temperament of the two parties. Often a girl of 20 is as settled in her character and disposition as most women of 30, while many men of 40 are still mere boys at heart.

The best way to break off an engagement is to present a coun- ter-attraction. Send your daughter off on a visit where she will meet boys of her own age, and perhaps she will forget her 40-year-old suitor. Ridicule is another good weapon. Girls can forgive a man most anything else, but they can't bear for him to look ridiculous. The one argument that your daugh- ter will not be able to combat is to have her sweetheart called "grandpa."

However, when a girl has a stubborn disposition, it is fatal to use opposition; it only makes her the man's champion.

MR. AND MRS.
Answer: Try to get acquainted. When we say we can't understand people, nine times out of ten we
